Statement of Purpose for Hamburg Historic District Amendment-Increase-Decrease

The Hamburg Historic District was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1983 along with several other individual properties and historic districts as part of the Multiple Resource Application entitled "Historical and Architectural Resources of Davenport." Over the last 33 years, a number of changes have occurred within the historic district and additional research has been conducted on several properties. A strong neighborhood organization and increased utilization of the federal and state historic tax credit programs within the neighborhood has stimulated investment in several blocks, while demolitions due to neglect, fire, and other community development have negatively impacted the historic district.

This amendment project was thus designed to meet several goals to update the Hamburg Historic District:

- Boundary/Integrity: With demolitions of properties throughout the historic district but particularly along the edges, the overall integrity of the Hamburg Historic District and boundary of the district has been re-evaluated through this amendment. Currently, 360 buildings are located within the original district boundary. Overall, 92 houses/buildings and around 48 outbuildings/garages have been demolished within the original historic district since the listing in 1983. Demolitions and remaining block integrity were closely assessed. Additionally, a re-survey of the properties within the current district boundary was undertaken, including historic research on properties to assess their integrity and significance within the historic district. Properties immediately adjacent to the current district boundary were also evaluated at a limited level, with one property further researched and noted to relate to the significance of the historic district. Thus, the boundary has been increased to include this adjacent property. The boundary has also been decreased on the southeast corner, southwest corner, northwest corner, and northeast corner to eliminate half-blocks with a high number of demolitions, resulting low level of block integrity, and overall disconnect from the historic district, physically and historically.

- Period of significance: The period of significance was defined in the original nomination as a broad period, without specific dates included in the nomination. Thus, definition of a period of significance was included among the goals for the amendment. With the research completed for the amendment project, a more specific period of significance related to the significant historical and architectural development of the Hamburg Historic District was defined (1848-1926).
- Resource classifications: The original survey and nomination classified properties as “A” (key contributing), “B” (contributing), and “C” (non-contributing). It did not include a specific resource count of contributing and non-contributing properties, though mapping was located that showed key contributing, contributing, and non-contributing resources (key contributing is no longer used as a category). As noted, a number of demolitions have also occurred throughout the historic district over the past 33 years, affecting counts of both contributing and non-contributing resources. Other resources that appear as contributing or non-contributing on the mapping have also been rehabilitated or otherwise altered, affecting their integrity and status within the historic district. Thus, the survey and research component of the project included re-evaluation of each property within the historic district to update contributing and non-contributing evaluations. Brick streets and alleys, often included as contributing resources in more recent nominations, were also not included in the original nomination. The amended nomination thus includes re-evaluation of the status of each resource within the district and a specific count of resources within the amended boundary for the Hamburg Historic District, as well as outlining resources eliminated from the historic district (due to demolition or boundary revisions).
- Table of resources: The original nomination did not include a table of resources, as is typically required in current nominations. Historical and architectural information on individual properties is limited to what was documented on individual site forms for “A” properties and included within the narrative description and statement of significance. The table of resources typically includes a historic name, significant date/s, history of the property, architectural style and features, materials, modifications/integrity, and district status. It then provides a reference point for the resources in the historic district for later projects, such as historic tax credit applications. Thus, a key part of the amendment project was to compile a table of resources, both to update resources currently extant in the historic district and to provide historical and architectural information on the properties through field survey and some additional research. The survey component to research each property within the historic district included a review of previous survey and research information, property owner research, limited city directory research (residents/occupation), limited census research (residents/ethnicity/occupations), and limited cemetery records research (verification of spellings, death dates if relevant). The goal of this research was to identify dates of construction for each resource within the historic district and an overall understanding of the history and development of the property (contributing to the evaluation of the period of significance, resource status/counts, and historical information on the property and district). This information is included on the updated table of resources at the end of Section 7 in this nomination. The broader goal of this research was to support the original statement of significance and evaluation of the boundary, blocks, and individual properties within the historic district as related to the significance of the district. This research also contributed to a greater understanding and verification of the previously stated/listed historic significance of German heritage within the neighborhood.
- Historic context: Significant additional work to the existing historic contexts, both within the Hamburg Historic District nomination and the Multiple Property Document entitled “Historical and Architectural Resources of Davenport,” was not included within the scope of the amendment project. Limited additional information was added through the research component to clarify the statement of significance summary paragraphs in Section 8, with the remainder of the section reflecting the language from the original nomination.

Narrative Description

(Describe the historic and current physical appearance and condition of the property. Describe contributing and noncontributing resources if applicable. Begin with a summary paragraph that briefly describes the general characteristics of the property, such as its location, type, style, method of construction, setting, size, and significant features. Indicate whether the property has historic integrity.)

Summary Paragraph

The Hamburg Historic District is a collection of primarily single family residences that sit on the hill to the immediate northwest of downtown Davenport, overlooking the Mississippi River. The neighborhood was primarily developed from 1848 to 1926, with a number of large Victorian residences characterizing the district. Per the original nomination (1982), the Hamburg Historic District contains the most architecturally significant residences and highest concentration of historic buildings in the German neighborhood known as "Hamburg."¹ The boundary was originally drawn to outline this concentration of historic residences approximately from 5th Street (north side only) north to 9th Street (including both sides) and from Ripley Street (including both sides) west to Vine Street (east side only). Topography contributed to the definition of the boundary of the neighborhood, particularly on the north and east edges. With alterations within the historic district and re-evaluation through this amendment, the boundary has been amended slightly (decreased in four areas, increased in one area) and more clearly defined, including the blocks along W. 5th St from Western Avenue to Brown Street (north side only), W. 6th St from Harrison west to Warren (north side only in 800 block), W. 7th St from the east side of Ripley Street west to near Vine Street, W. 8th St from Ripley Street west to Vine Street, and W. 9th St from Ripley Street to Brown Street. Topography continues to play a defining role in the edges of the neighborhood, as well as the historic character of the blocks and development. The amended historic district encompasses roughly 22 blocks (approximately 79 acres).

The amended Hamburg Historic District continues to reflect the most architecturally significant residences and blocks with the highest concentration of historic buildings in this historically German neighborhood. Overall, there are 226 properties with buildings within the amended historic district, including 78 with the main building (typically a single family residence) constructed from 1848 to 1879, 72 constructed from 1880 to 1899, 67 constructed from 1900 to 1926, and nine built after the period of significance from 1927 through 2016. Two-story single-family residences dominate the character of the blocks included within the historic district, comprising 140 of the 219 properties built by 1926 (the end of the period of significance). These residences primarily reflect Italianate and Queen Anne styles, with other 19th century Victorian styles and 20th century revival and Craftsman styles mixed in. Gable-front single-family houses, both two-story and smaller, are also cited as a noted building type in the historic district. Smaller, earlier, single-family houses are mixed with larger later houses on some blocks, contributing to the significance of the earlier development of the neighborhood and these blocks. Among these properties, 70 have carriage houses, garages, or other outbuildings in addition to the main buildings, and two later garages exist as the only building on two properties. Seven properties built as duplexes are found within the neighborhood, scattered among single-family residences on seven blocks. Three commercial buildings are located along the Gaines Street corridor that extends up the hill into and through the neighborhood. One set of apartments is also found along this corridor, and three sets of apartments are located at the southeast corner, closest to downtown. The church historically known as the German Methodist Episcopal Church remains in the southwest corner of the historic district. Overall, these resources comprise 229 contributing and 80 non-contributing buildings within the amended Hamburg Historic District. Finally, in addition to buildings, the neighborhood retains a number of historic brick streets, historic brick alleys, and historic retaining walls. Each of these categories of resources is counted as a contributing structure, resulting in three contributing structures within the historic district.

Narrative Description

Hamburg Historic District sits immediately to the northwest of the core of downtown Davenport. The Mississippi River runs east-west in Davenport, with primarily commercial development on the blocks north of the river to 5th Street. Per the 1982 nomination: "The land slopes gradually northward until it reaches the alley north of 5th Street and then begins a much more dramatic slope. The bluff peaks around 7th Street and then sharply descends again north of 9th Street. This geographical location with a prominent view of the city and the river quickly became a prime building location for the middle and upper income Germans. A second boundary division became the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad tracks built along 5th Street in the 1850's, separating Hamburg from the lower income Germans south of the tracks adjacent to the industrial section. The geography of the area gave rise to the term 'Gold Coast,' to describe the bluffline portion of W. 6th Street extending from Ripley Street to Gaines Street."² The topography of the Hamburg Historic District thus plays a key role in the definition of the neighborhood, as well as the historical development patterns and connection to German immigrants. The amended district boundary continues to encompass this neighborhood on the bluff (hill) to the northwest of downtown Davenport.

The houses in Hamburg Historic District were primarily built along east-west streets parallel to the downtown development and the Mississippi River, with east-west alleys bisecting the blocks. This overall pattern of development continues to define the historic district. Gaines Street developed as the main north-south corridor through the neighborhood. The overall development and character of the Hamburg Historic District continues to reflect the patterns noted in the 1982 nomination: "The earliest concentration of residential styles occurs along 5th Street, the southern boundary of the district. These residences are generally simpler in design and reflect the early growth period of Hamburg. The more elaborate residences begin as soon as the hills do. Located on steep, tree-covered lots, there is a large concentration of houses along 6th and 7th Streets, as well as the 600 and 700 blocks of Ripley, Western, Gaines, Brown, and Warren Streets. These are two to three story houses, richly ornamented and commanding an impressive view of the city and river. The individually significant structures begin to thin out along 8th and 9th Streets, but the simpler structures which surround them form the basic late 19th and early 20th century residential fabric which gives continuity and integrity to the historic district."³

The original nomination from 1982 describes the architectural character of the Hamburg Historic District to wit:⁴

A variety of architectural styles are represented in the Hamburg Historic District. The dominant style of the early residences was the Greek Revival.⁵ Larger Greek Revival examples from this period are the two-story, symmetrical, side gable houses, such as the Schriebel House at 732 W. 5th Street (c.1855, brick) and the Rothschild House at 714 W. 6th Street (c.1870, brick), which have central doors and Greek Revival window ornament.⁶ The houses at 716 W. 5th Street (c.1860s, c.1899, frame) and 911 W. 7th Street (c.1886, brick) are good examples of houses that retain the traditional Greek Revival symmetrical form, but have introduced some later Victorian ornament.⁷

During the late 1860s and 1870s, a house type that was popular in the community was the two-story, three-bay front gable house, a form derived from the earlier Greek Revival temple form. This Davenport prototype, commonly though not exclusively associated with the city's German population, displayed an off-center door, narrow segmental arched windows with two-over-two-lights and often an oculus in the gable. Good examples of this form include the Hartmann House at 604 W. 5th Street (c.1873, brick), the Struck

House at 614 W. 5th Street (1877, brick), the Hageboeck House at 623 W. 6th Street (c.1869, brick), the Clausen House at 630 W. 6th Street (c.1873, brick), the Hill House at 724 W. 8th Street (c.1873, brick), and the Petersen House at 530 Western Avenue (c.1867, brick). An attractive variation of this distinctive form are the houses at 927 W. 8th Street (c.1873) and 630 Warren Street (c.1867), which contain the familiar three-bay segmental arched first floor openings, but display two round arched windows in the gabled second story.

Beginning in the late 1870s, the economic successes of the first generation Germans became visible in the size and elaboration of their Hamburg homes. This post-Civil War era saw a proliferation of picturesque designs expressed in Victorian Gothic, Second Empire, Italianate, Queen Anne and a variety of vernacular interpretations of these styles. A good example of Victorian Gothic is the Francis Ochs House at 729 W. 6th Street (c.1874), which features a steep roof, dominant front gable, cresting and a spacious gallery. This house expresses an early Gothic mode popularized by A.J. Downing, while the early 20th century house at 615 Ripley (c.1907), with tower and crenelated parapet, derives more from medieval models. The Second Empire style, characterized by a steep mansard roof, appeared briefly in the Henry Frahm House at 321 W. 6th Street (c. 1880).

The Italianate style influenced a number of Hamburg residences. The Lambrite-Petersen House at 510 W. 6th Street is one of Davenport's few examples of the Italian Villa, characterized by a tall square corner tower with wide bracketed eaves and round arched windows (c.1856-57). Other outstanding examples of the Victorian Italianate are the August Steffen, Sr. House at 420 W. 6th (c. 1865), Henry Lischer House at 624 W. 6th designed by the local architect Fredrick G. Clausen (c.1869), and the F. Max D. Petersen House at 629 Brown Street (c.1878). A late interpretation of the Italian Villa form is the Wm. J. Wiese House at 709 Brown designed by Gustav A. Hanssen (c. 1895), which displays a three-story, off-center, square tower, embellished by ogee arches and a terra cotta panel; and wide bracketed eaves.

By far, the most common style is the Queen Anne and its various interpretations. Built almost entirely in the decade of the 1890s, the Hamburg houses influenced by this style generally display any combination of the following characteristics: irregular plan and massing, variety of texture and material, bay windows, steep multiple roof lines, round or polygonal turrets, and small classical detail. Two houses designed by Benjamin F. Aufderhiede are excellent examples of the Queen Anne. His design for the J. C. Struck House at 703 Ripley (c.1897) is distinguished by a main facade flanked by a two-story polygonal tower on one side and a three-story rounded tower on the other, while the Herman Schmidt House at 525 W. 9th Street (c.1898) displays a three-story polygonal corner tower and gabled bays, in combination with a spacious gallery and classical ornament. Good examples of textural variety include the William Mueller House at 413 W. 6th Street (c.1893), which features a clapboarded first floor and half-timbered and stuccoed upper story, and the Hirschl-Seiffert House at 532 W. 6th Street (c.1890), which emphasizes the exposed timber framing and rich wood ornament in its polychrome finish. Some other notable examples whose irregular roofs and tall towers form focal points within the district are the Andresen House at 726 W. 6th Street (c.1880), the Beiderbecke House at 510 W. 7th Street (c.1894), the Koehler House at 817 W. 7th Street (c.1895), and the Witt House at 604 Gaines (c.1893).⁸

The Hamburg Historic District began to display influences of the more classical and symmetrical Georgian Colonial Revival around the turn of the century. The Dr. Heinrich Matthey House at 505 W. 6th, with its symmetrical front, but Queen Anne influenced towers along the side, reveals the transition during this period (1900). The best example of a Georgian Colonial Revival House is the August Steffen, Jr. House at 412 W. 6th St. designed by Frederick G. Clausen (1901). The three-story brick house with prominent rounded bays flanking the central double Ionic gallery is an extremely well-detailed example of the style and an early 20th century landmark in the district. Also represented in the early 20th century architecture of the district are a few good examples of the Craftsman style. The most outstanding example is the house that the architect Deidrich J. Harfst designed for himself at 424 W. 7th St., distinguished by the half-timbered upper story, wall dormer with leaded glass windows and decorative panels, and the brick porch piers with geometrical brackets (c.1905).

⁸ House at 402 W. 7th St deleted as example, demolished in 1986.

Through this description, the architectural significance of the Hamburg Historic District is clearly outlined as focusing on large single family homes perched on the bluff overlooking downtown and the Mississippi River. While these homes continue to comprise the core of the architectural significance of the district, the smaller vernacular houses mixed in with the large homes on these blocks should also be recognized for their significant historical value within the physical development of the Hamburg Historic District. One and one-and-one-half-story houses were initially built on the blocks in the neighborhood from the 1840s to the 1870s, along with other more vernacular two-story homes. While these lots were often redeveloped with larger, grand houses from the 1880s into the 1910s, a number of these smaller, earlier homes remain interspersed, particularly on the blocks adjacent to the core of the historic district. As noted, these simpler structures assist in forming the basic late 19th and early 20th century residential fabric that gives continuity and integrity to the historic district. Likewise, the handful of commercial and institutional buildings mixed into these blocks provide further integrity for the neighborhood.

With additional research conducted through the survey and research component of the amendment project, further discussion can be provided on the physical characteristics of the Hamburg Historic District. Overall, there are 226 properties with buildings within the amended historic district. Within the revised district boundary, there are 77 properties that date to the earliest period of development from 1848 to 1879, with the majority extant from the 1860s (42) and 1870s (28). While other properties may retain cores that are earlier, their physical appearance and integrity date to a later period. These buildings include 28 brick buildings and 49 frame buildings, with a higher percentage of brick buildings noted as likely surviving from this period. The vast majority of the properties were constructed as single-family residences, including 46 two-story houses, 15 one-and-one-half-story houses, 13 one-story houses, and one two-story duplex. Vernacular gable-front houses (33) and side-gable houses (15) without particular stylistic influence are the most common, along with examples of Greek Revival (4), Gothic Revival (5), Italian Villa (1), Italianate (11), and Second Empire (1) houses. One of the oldest properties in the Hamburg Historic District is a two-story gable-front building constructed at 517 W. 7th Street in 1848 by the Congregational Church as Iowa College. The college operated here until 1856 when it moved to Grinnell, and the brick building was converted to a residence, later expanded with a side wing around 1891. Two churches were originally listed in the district, with one demolished and the German Methodist Episcopal Church remaining at the northeast corner W. 6th Street and Warren Street. Two buildings that operated as combination residences and neighborhood groceries were constructed on opposite corners of W. 8th Street and Gaines Street in this period as well, one by Christian Jipp (c.1867, 1 story, gable-front brick) and one by John Hoehn (c.1868, 2 story, side gable, clad in stucco). These neighborhood groceries served the residents of the neighborhood on the hill overlooking downtown.

The middle and upper class houses constructed from 1880 to 1899 form a significant portion of the core of the architectural significance cited for the Hamburg Historic District. These houses are often located on premium lots on the crest or side of the hill with views of the Mississippi River. Overall, there are 71 extant properties that date to construction in the neighborhood in the 1880s (24) and 1890s (47). While the earlier houses include a strong mix of extant brick homes, these houses were primarily built with frame construction that lent itself to Victorian ornamentation, with only five brick houses noted among these extant homes. The vast majority of the properties were again constructed as single-family residences, including 56 two-story houses, nine one-and-one-half-story houses, and six one-story houses. While the 1880s include a mix of earlier styles such as Italianate, Second Empire, and Victorian Gothic, Queen Anne houses dominated the style of new houses built by 1887 to 1899, with 34 extant houses reflecting this style. While the majority of houses built in this period were owner-occupied, nine have been identified that appear to have been constructed as rental properties. These rental houses tend to be more vernacular, gable-front buildings. By this period of development, the neighborhood had evolved to its recognized middle to upper class status, with no other building types constructed among the extant buildings on the blocks within the revised district boundary.

The survey and research for the amendment for the Hamburg Historic District assisted in definition of the last period of development for the district from 1900 to 1926 and this end date for the period of significance. While little is included in the original nomination on the first decades of the 20th century, these houses are indicated on the associated map as contributing within the historic district. A number of large middle to upper class houses continued to be built in these decades, reflecting Colonial Revival, Classical Revival, Craftsman, and other early 20th century styles. Overall, this period witnessed a tapering of development as other new subdivisions were platted and developed in Davenport. However, large two-story single-family homes constructed within the core of the district through 1926 by families with German heritage continue the earlier significance and cited characteristic development of the neighborhood. Overall, 67 properties within the revised district boundary date to construction from 1900 to 1926, including 36 from 1900 to 1909, 27 from 1910 to 1919, and 14 from 1920 to 1926. These houses were built on remaining or redeveloped lots within the core of the historic district, with more development noted on adjacent blocks linked by the topography of the hill and scattered earlier development to the neighborhood. Construction trends of the last quarter century continued into this period, with most of the buildings (57) reflecting frame construction. The majority of the properties (55) were again constructed as single-family residences, including 35 two-story houses, 18 one-and-one-half-story houses, and two one-story houses. Larger houses continued to reflect the Queen Anne style into the first decade of the 20th century (8), mixed with various revival style homes (Georgian Colonial, Classical, Dutch Colonial, Spanish, Tudor, Later Gothic) (10) and the new Craftsman style (10). The last of the large significant houses constructed within the core of the Hamburg Historic District were the Richard and Selma Haak House built in 1924 at 417 W. 7th Street and the Phillip T. & Mae Steffen, Sr. House built in 1926 at 601 Scott, respectively reflecting Colonial Revival and Craftsman styles. While some gable-front and cross-gable houses continued to be built, simpler houses reflected the Foursquare style (9). The majority of the one-and-one-half-story houses were bungalows, with scattered examples in the first two decades (7) and prevalence in the early 1920s (8). While the majority of the houses continued to be built for owner-occupied housing, seven have been identified that appear to have been constructed as rental properties.

The remaining 12 properties built in this period likewise primarily reflect meeting housing needs within the neighborhood. Six of the seven duplexes built in the revised boundary of the Hamburg Historic District date to construction from 1900 to 1914, with owners living in about half of the properties. These two-story frame properties are scattered on blocks within the historic district, generally on those blocks adjacent to the core with more development in this period. As a duplex under current standards, they are tabulated as two resources. A small two-story brick building at the northwest corner of Gaines and 9th Street was also built around 1908, a block north of the commercial buildings at Gaines and 8th Street. This rental property initially included a saloon on the first story and associated residence on the second story, but it was converted to solely rental residential uses by the 1920s. A prominent German resident of the neighborhood, Louis P. Best, undertook two more substantial rental housing projects in this period, financing the construction of a series of four brick rowhouse apartments around 1905 in the 700 block of the Gaines Street corridor, designed in the Craftsman style by Clausen & Clausen. After selling this property, Best then again partnered with Frederick G. Clausen to construct the Roosevelt Apartment in 1907 on the southeast corner of the neighborhood in the 300 block of W. 5th Street (property added to the historic district within the boundary increase). This four-story brick apartment complex reflects elements of the Classical Revival style. Around the corner in the 500 block of Ripley Street, John P. Wohler had built a three-story brick Classical Revival apartment building with six units around 1905, which he then followed with the construction of a smaller three-unit, three-story, Classical Revival brick apartment building around 1909. These three properties concentrated at the southeast corner of the historic district located closest to downtown represent the southeast edge of residential development of the neighborhood, with primarily commercial development then on the flatter land to the east and south.

In addition to these major property types constructed through the Hamburg Historic District from 1848 to 1926, there were also a number of outbuildings that were historically in the neighborhood. Sanborn maps from 1892 and 1910 show the early outbuildings and carriage houses located in the neighborhood, many of which were then replaced by garages from the 1910s to 1970s. A handful of historic outbuildings remain within the neighborhood. One of the earliest is a side-gable stone building believed to date to the late 1840s along the alley on the property at 520 Western Avenue. It is the only extant stone building identified within the historic district, though a number of properties have prominent stone foundations. Five other extant outbuildings appear to date to the 1870s and 1880s. Seventeen extant carriage houses or garages appear to date to the early 20th century, through the end of the period of significance in 1926. An additional 17 extant garages were built from the late 1920s to 1950s, with an additional 12 built in the 1960s and 1970s. Since the district was listed in 1983, 20 additional garages have been constructed. The garages built after 1926 are counted as non-contributing due to the later date of construction.

Through the decades after the end of the period of significance in 1926, a few changes are noted for the Hamburg Historic District, as amended. In addition to the garages noted above, seven additional houses have been constructed since 1926, which are counted as non-contributing buildings. The four earliest houses were built around 1931 (bungalow), 1938 (Cape Cod Revival), 1946 (ranch), and 1959 (raised ranch). These houses date after the significant development of the neighborhood that ended with the construction of 14 houses from 1920 to 1926. Additional houses were then built in 1977, 1982, and 1987. This later residential development is scattered among the blocks of the historic district. Two of the garages noted above were also built on lots of demolished houses in 1998 and 2005, currently the only building associated with those parcels. Additionally, two houses built in other neighborhoods were moved to vacant lots in this neighborhood, one in 1956 (to 708 W. 6th Street) and one in 1963 (to 607 W. 8th Street). The architecture is similar to the neighborhood, and the move resulted in a similar setting on a previously residential parcel for these houses on their new sites, so they are counted as contributing. One house was more recently moved in 2011 from its original lot in the district at 718 Ripley around the corner to vacated lots at 411 W. 8th Street. This short move within the district retains a sufficient degree of integrity of location/setting for this house to retain its contributing status in the new location. In addition to these building changes, several properties also have been demolished within the neighborhood. These demolitions include some prior to the original listing in 1983 and 92 additional properties since 1983 that were included within the historic district initially. Some of the vacant lots remain within the amended district boundary, while other lots are excluded from the historic district through this amendment (see following sections on integrity and boundary).

Finally, there are other features that define aspects of the Hamburg Historic District. A number of brick streets and alleys are found throughout the historic district, particularly within the south half. The brick streets are tabulated as a group as a contributing structure within the amended Hamburg Historic District, and the brick alleys are tabulated as a separate group as a contributing structure. A number of stone retaining walls are found along 5th Street, 6th Street, alleys, and side streets within the historic district, and other properties retain concrete retaining walls from various periods. They are noted as site features for individual properties on the table of resources, with those historic retaining walls (built by 1926) that are the most prominent within the neighborhood noted with an asterisk (*). The historic retaining walls are likely tabulated as a group as a contributing structure within the historic district. The steep bluff along Scott Street and Western Avenue prohibited street development between 6th and 7th streets, with steps noted instead in this location on Scott Street on Sanborn maps in 1892, 1910, and 1956. The current concrete steps appear to date after 1926, though retain this characteristic feature of the historic district. Likewise, concrete steps, rather than sidewalks, currently flank this steep hill on Ripley Street from 6th Street to 7th Street. These features are part of the overall fabric and characteristics of the historic district.

Integrity

The original integrity criteria for the Hamburg Historic District and for individual buildings within the historic district is outlined broadly in the “Historical and Architectural Resources of Davenport” Multiple Resource Application. These criteria provided the overall framework for the evaluation of significance and integrity, with additional information related to the evaluation documented on individual site inventory forms. Site inventory forms were only completed for any building determined to have individual significance, leaving the evaluation of integrity for other properties less defined. The 1982 nomination notes:

“Buildings were evaluated architecturally according to four broad criteria developed by Iowa's Division of Historic Preservation in 1978:

- 1) Architectural significance: Factors under this category include aesthetic and formal value (such as scale, balance, symmetry, contrast, and variety); architectural merit (degree to which a building displays distinctive characteristics of style, type, period or method of construction); the architect, builder or engineer; and its rarity (both originally and today).
- 2) Environmental stature - This criterion involves looking at a building in the context of its immediate surroundings and in the city as a whole. A landmark building relates to the entire cityscape; a focus is a dominant element in a particular neighborhood or streetscape; an incident, while not a dominant feature, stands out from its immediate neighbors due to such characteristics as setback, size, form, use, or materials; tissue refers to a building that is not necessarily more notable than its neighbors, but with them, establishes a feeling of time, place, scale, or association characteristic of a particular block or neighborhood.
- 3) Integrity of context - This criterion requires consideration of the degree to which a building's setting (both immediate and in the larger context of block or neighborhood) retains its historic form, the nature of changes to these settings, and how these changes affect the visual role of the building in its landscape.
- 4) Integrity of fabric - This criterion requires assessing the degree to which a building retains those features and qualities for which it was judged architecturally significant. Also considered are the date of alterations and to what extent those alterations contribute or detract from architecturally important features of the building as a whole.”⁹

As part of this amendment prepared for the Hamburg Historic District, the overall integrity of the district was re-evaluated, utilizing these standards previously outlined in combination with current standards and language for evaluating integrity of a historic district. As noted previously, the large number of demolitions within the historic district was among the reasons triggering the need for an amendment for the Hamburg Historic District. Additionally, over the last 33 years, a number of properties have been remodeled, sometimes sympathetic to and enhancing the historic fabric and character of the building while at other times resulting in the obscuring or complete loss of historic materials and elements. Thus, updated and specified integrity standards are outlined below and applied within the amendment for the re-evaluation of the boundary of the historic district and re-evaluation of the individual properties within the historic district.

By definition, a historic district “possesses a significant concentration, linkage, or continuity of sites, buildings, structures, or objects united historically or aesthetically by plan or physical development.” Historic districts are collections of buildings that derive their importance from the group and that possess a sense of time and place. They have a common period of significance that may extend over a few years or multiple decades. Historic districts might have a shared building type, style, or material, or they may be composed of a variety of resources. However, the neighborhood must possess characteristics that united it historically or aesthetically by plan or physical development to be considered a historic district. The integrity for a historic district is judged on the basis of the integrity as a neighborhood as well as the integrity of the individual components. The majority of the district's individual buildings should retain integrity as contributing buildings even if they lack individual distinction. Additionally, the relationship between the individual buildings must be substantially unaltered since the period of significance. Demolitions and intrusions (such as buildings constructed outside the period of significance) will be judged on their relative number, size, scale, design, and location to determine their impact on the integrity of the district as a whole. A historic district does not retain integrity if it contains sufficient alterations, demolitions, or intrusions that it no longer conveys the sense of architectural and/or historical qualities of the physical appearance of the historic district during the period of significance.

In the re-evaluation of the historic district as a property type, these integrity standards were applied to the Hamburg Historic District to assess its overall integrity as well as integrity of individual blocks. The 1956 Sanborn fire insurance was utilized as a basis of mapping to evaluate the historic fabric of the Hamburg Historic District, dated from 30 years after the end of the period of significance (Figure 4). The map was color coded to indicate buildings constructed by 1930 (pink; age dating this period, regardless of individual integrity/evaluation), buildings constructed from 1930 to 1956 (blue), and buildings constructed since 1956 (green). The map was also color-coded in relation to demolished properties, with properties within the historic district that were demolished prior to the listing in 1983 remaining white and properties within the original boundary for the historic district that have been demolished since the 1983 listing coded as yellow. With this map information and additional information from the field survey component, integrity standards were then applied to the historic district as a whole as well as to individual blocks.

Although there have been around 92 buildings and 48 outbuildings demolished within the original boundary since the Hamburg Historic District was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1983, this evaluation process quickly showed that the vast majority of the blocks within the core of the historic district retained sufficient integrity to convey their historic physical appearance and significance. Demolitions of houses were largely scattered among the inner blocks of the historic district, with concentrations of demolished buildings found along edges in each corner of the historic district. Blocks were typically evaluated at the half-block level, and they were generally found as remaining intact and retaining sufficient integrity when they continued to have more than 60% of the main buildings dating to the period of significance (c.1848-1926). Demolitions and new construction prior to 1983 were factored into this evaluation, as well as the alterations to the historic appearance of the block since 1983 due to demolitions and new construction. Individual property integrity also factored into the block level evaluation, as properties dating to construction within the historic district during the period of significance but since altered to the degree not to retain sufficient integrity as a contributing building also detract from the overall historic integrity of the block. While part of the historic fabric of the neighborhood, the demolition and construction of outbuildings along alleys was determined to have a lesser impact on block integrity related to the overall historic appearance and integrity of the historic district. The majority of these outbuildings also were originally classified as non-contributing. This block integrity evaluation played a key role in the amendment including a boundary increase-decrease component, as further discussed and applied in detail in the following section related to the boundary changes.

Further definition of the integrity standards for individual buildings to determine contributing or non-contributing status was also quickly assessed as needed to adequately re-evaluate resources within the amended Hamburg Historic District. In general, individual residential resources are classified as contributing resources in a historic district when they retain sufficient integrity and date to the period of significance for the historic district. As a contributing building in a historic district, alterations throughout the period of significance for the district should be considered significant. Alterations range from stylish updates that reference specific popular architectural influences to small projects conducted over a period of time, perhaps by several tenants or owners. These changes are significant as they reflect the development of a historic district within the period of significance. While a greater degree of alterations to individual resources can be accommodated in a historic district before the integrity of the district is compromised, buildings must retain essential characteristics such as massing, fenestration patterns, and architectural stylistic features to remain as contributing buildings. Alterations outside of the period of significance for the historic district are generally recognized to be acceptable on contributing buildings as follows:

Hamburg Historic District (amended)
Name of Property

Scott County, Iowa
County and State

- Non-historic or non-original siding materials such as asbestos shingles, asphalt brick, aluminum, and vinyl shall not solely prohibit a building from being contributing.
- Porches enclosed after the period of significance that have original columns visible or the enclosure is easily reversible with little or no damage to the massing and proportions of the original porch are acceptable.
- If window openings do not retain historic sashes, the majority of the window openings retain their original/historic sizes, particularly on primary façades.
- Any additions to the house are subordinate to the original building, preferably at the rear, and do not generally alter the façade or cover any significant architectural detailing.
- No significant, character-defining features have been removed. If small decorative elements have been removed, the overall features of the style of the house should remain intact.

Substantial, character-altering changes, or a combination of changes such as resized window openings, removal of historic features, and non-historic siding, shall result in the building being classified as non-contributing. Examples of significant changes include major changes in roofline, incompatible porch enclosures of a non-reversible nature, and major additions or modifications of primary façades inconsistent with the proportion, rhythm, and materials of the building. Buildings that have been altered to such a degree that the original building is no longer readily identifiable or residential buildings constructed outside of the period of significance will also be classified as non-contributing. Finally, a building not sharing the historic associations or significance of the historic district will be considered a non-contributing building.

Residential outbuildings are typically expected to have sustained more changes than the associated residential buildings. Many of these buildings were updated to meet modern needs, such as the conversion to a garage or installation of a new garage door. This change will be permitted for contributing resources within a historic district. Likewise, cladding in non-historic siding materials such as asbestos shingles, asphalt brick, aluminum, and vinyl will not solely prohibit a building from being contributing. Overall, the general form and design of the outbuilding should remain intact for it to be contributing. Additionally, some original material must remain visible, or a distinctive form and design be clearly visible, for a residential outbuilding to be contributing. An outbuilding, though historic, that retains few visual clues as to its age due to non-historic cladding and replacement of other historic features will be classified as non-contributing.

Finally, National Register standards have additional requirements for a moved building to be considered contributing. The assumption is that a move detracts from a building's significance by destroying its original setting and context, as well as being an intrusion on the historic integrity of the block in the new location. However, buildings that were moved into a historic district during the period of significance are likely significant within the residential development of the neighborhood during that period and would then be considered contributing. Buildings moved within the historic district that date to construction in the period of significance but were moved within the historic district after the period of significance may be contributing if they continue to reflect the significance of historic district in their new location within the historic district and the new site was similarly developed previously. Buildings moved from outside the historic district that reflect the architecture of the historic district, retain a setting in their new location historically similar to their original site, reflect the significance of historic district, and reflect the historic development of site may be considered to be contributing. Buildings that do not reflect the significance of the historic district or are located on incompatible sites would be considered non-contributing. Building alterations considered acceptable for moved buildings include changes in foundation materials, changes in porches built after a move, and some changes in building orientation. Moves are considered detrimental if they resulted in the loss of significant architectural elements, even if they are within the historic district. These buildings would be non-contributing resources. Moved resources that were built outside the period of significance for the district will be considered non-contributing buildings within the district, as they do not reflect the remainder of the district in history and architecture.

These integrity considerations for individual resources within the Hamburg Historic District were applied to the individual evaluation of each property during the field survey and research component of this project. The results of this evaluation are included in the table of resources for the amended Hamburg Historic District in a subsequent section. The status as outlined on the map for the original historic district was considered in relation to alterations prior to or after the listing in 1983. In several instances, it was unclear why a building may have been classified as either contributing or non-contributing, and the lack of individual site inventory forms from the original listing did not assist in answering these questions. The amendment project also benefited from the additional research conducted on each property within the historic district to better assess dates of significant alterations that detract from the historic appearance of the building within the period of significance, both prior to the 1983 listing and since the 1983 listing. These properties were then re-classified as non-contributing. Other properties that do not appear to have significant alterations since the period of significance were then classified as contributing. Site inventory forms for each property are in the process of being prepared by the City of Davenport to document the research and survey information collected during the course of the amendment project, and they provide some additional information for each property beyond what is included within this nomination.

Integrity statement for amended Hamburg Historic District

The evaluation of the historical and architectural significance and development of the Hamburg Historic District, along with the integrity of the blocks within the Hamburg Historic District, resulted in the boundary increase-decrease as referenced previously and outlined further in the following section. This statement of integrity applies to the amended Hamburg Historic District, as outlined within the revised boundary.

The amended Hamburg Historic District retains good integrity as a district and continues to strongly reflect the residential buildings that define its historic and architectural significance. The district retains its historic location and setting on the bluff/hill to the northwest of downtown Davenport, and the houses retain their historic views of the Mississippi River to the south. The overall integrity of the design of the neighborhood is intact, with historic workmanship and materials evident on the majority of buildings throughout the district. It retains its association to the residential development of Davenport and the overall feeling of a historic residential district. Specific aspects of the integrity of the property include:

Location: The Hamburg Historic District has historically and continues to be located on the hill/bluff to the immediate northwest of downtown Davenport and the Mississippi River (runs east-west in Davenport).

Setting: The setting of the Hamburg Historic District continues to be defined by the topography of the bluff/hill of the residential neighborhood overlooking downtown Davenport and the Mississippi River. The historic district remains primarily residential, with commercial buildings historically and currently located to the south and east and other residential neighborhoods located to the west and north.

Design: The overall design of the Hamburg Historic District remains intact, with houses primarily constructed on east-west streets parallel to the downtown commercial development and the Mississippi River, with blocks bisected by alleys throughout the district. The majority of the blocks have few demolitions or later intrusions, maintaining the overall scale, density, and design of the historic residential neighborhood. Houses are setback depending on their particular block within the historic district, with generally uniform setbacks on each street/block. Houses constructed on the crest or side of the hill/bluff are designed to face south, regardless of their relation to the adjacent street, resulting in some "rear" elevations facing the street. Many individual historic buildings retain strong integrity of design and elements dating to their construction or later remodeling within the period of significance (c.1848 to 1926). Large stylistic homes are noted as the dominant architectural type and defining characteristic of the architectural significance of the district, with smaller houses interspersed on these blocks reflecting the initial period of development of the neighborhood. The predominant resource type throughout the Hamburg Historic District that defines the nature of its design continues to be the single family house. Other resource types mixed within these blocks are noted as part of the historic fabric and development of the neighborhood and also part of the overall design qualities of the Hamburg Historic District.

Materials: Approximately 80% of the buildings within the amended Hamburg Historic District are frame construction, clad in a variety of siding materials. Approximately half of those residences retain original (or uncovered and repaired) weatherboard siding. The remainder of the frame houses are clad in later asbestos, aluminum, or vinyl siding. Decorative features on these buildings are likewise typically wood, with some features lost due to installation of later siding. The remaining 20% of the buildings are brick construction, with over half of these buildings dating to construction by 1880. These buildings generally reflect the more substantial early construction particularly in the south half of the district, with earlier frame houses demolished and replaced or just simply demolished. Brick buildings have decorative brick, stone, and wood elements. Stone is utilized through the historic district as a material for foundations as well as for retaining walls. Several houses are designed with a raised stone foundation. Stone retaining walls range in scale from two feet to over seven feet. Concrete block (rusticated and plain) is also utilized as a foundation material for houses constructed in the 20th century, and concrete is also used for some later retaining walls. Asphalt shingles are found on the vast majority of roofs throughout the historic district. Wood double-hung windows remain on approximately two-thirds of the houses within the historic district, with replacement aluminum or vinyl sashes on the remaining properties. The condition of the materials throughout the historic district is generally good, with some need for maintenance noted for several properties.

Workmanship: The historic workmanship of the buildings within the Hamburg Historic District continues to be reflected in the design and materials. In addition to the general workmanship of the residential buildings, the historic workmanship is also evident through the many carved, casted, and molded historic building elements and accent material details. While other elements may have been replaced, these historic details were typically retained.

Feeling: The overall feeling of the Hamburg Historic District continues to be a historic residential neighborhood located on the hill/bluff to the northwest of downtown Davenport. The overall density of the buildings within the historic district has preserved the feeling of a historic neighborhood on the blocks included within the amended district.

Association: The Hamburg Historic District retains a strong association to the residential history of Davenport, reflected in the large and small historic homes throughout the district and the current residential function of the neighborhood.

Boundary

As noted, the evaluation of the current boundary and integrity of the historic district were key components of the nomination amendment project for the Hamburg Historic District. The boundary was originally drawn as a rectangular area to include notable examples of significant residential architecture and blocks with a high concentration of extant historic residences in the German neighborhood from approximately from 5th Street (north side only) north to 9th Street (including both sides) and from Ripley Street (including both sides) west to Vine Street (east side only). No boundary justification is included specifically within the "Historical and Architectural Resources of Davenport" Multiple Resource Application (MRA). Factors that influenced the determination of the boundary are discussed in the MRA within other context in the first two paragraphs of the Narrative Description and within the Statement of Significance.

Per the original nomination (1982), "the Hamburg Historic District contains the most architecturally significant residences and highest concentration of historic buildings in the German settled area known as "Hamburg." Although the Hamburg area stretches as far north as Locust and as far west as Division, the district boundaries have been limited to the area between 5th and 9th and Ripley and Vine to reflect the best examples of architectural styles and the highest concentration of historic buildings."¹⁰ The nomination continues: "The land slopes gradually northward until it reaches the alley north of 5th Street and then begins a much more dramatic slope. The bluff peaks around 7th Street and then sharply descends again north of 9th Street. This geographical location with a prominent view of the city and the river quickly became a prime building location for the middle and upper income Germans. A second boundary division became the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad tracks built along 5th Street in the 1850's, separating Hamburg from the lower income Germans south of the tracks adjacent to the industrial section. The geography of the area gave rise to the term 'Gold Coast,' to describe the bluffline portion of W. 6th Street extending from Ripley Street to Gaines Street."¹¹ The nomination later states: "Davenport Germans were a solid community geographically. Harrison Street formed the boundary between the Germans on the west and non-Germans on the east, while the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad tracks along 5th Street divided the middle and upper income Germans on the north from the lower income Germans in the "west end" and south of the tracks."

These statements related to the original definition of the boundary for the Hamburg Historic District were then applied for the amendment and re-evaluation of the boundary. Topography was noted as a key defining characteristic of the German neighborhood included within the historic district, both in the original 1982 nomination and through field survey work completed in 2015. The hill/bluff provided the premium lots for construction for middle to upper class Germans overlooking downtown Davenport and Mississippi River, with additional lots on slopes along each edge as well as along inner streets without views within this respected neighborhood. The topography of the hill was noted as continuing to provide a natural cohesive quality for the neighborhood, with distinctions then observed to the east, north, west, and south. While a number of demolitions had occurred within the neighborhood, the majority of the significant examples of the residential architecture originally cited as significant within the historic district remained intact and continued to define the prominent blocks. As noted, single family residences were observed as defining the character of the core of the historic district, with only scattered examples of other property types. Historic research completed throughout the course of the amendment project verified that residents on the majority of the blocks within the historic district were German at least from the 1880s through 1910s, with a mix of middle/upper class residents in larger homes and lower/middle class residents in smaller homes scattered among the blocks. Interestingly, birthplaces of the head of households identified in the 1880 census among the 74 extant houses dating from this period included only one actually born in the Hamburg region of Germany, with Holstein (29) and Schleswig (13) as the primary birthplaces for these German immigrants.

The boundary for the Hamburg Historic District was also noted as drawn to include the blocks within this German neighborhood with the highest concentration of historic buildings (strong block integrity). Due to a significant number of known demolitions over the last 33 years, remaining block integrity was then closely evaluated to determine if the blocks retained a sufficient level of integrity. The re-evaluation of the boundary and district integrity began with a basic identification of parcels within the original district boundary. Overall, 394 parcels were identified within the original boundary of the Hamburg Historic District (Figure 3). These parcels included 270 with buildings (house or house and outbuilding), 34 that were lots when the district was listed in 1983 (historically vacant or previously demolished), and 90 that were now lots that had buildings in 1983 (including one lot vacated by a move of its house to new other vacated combined lots). Seven of the lots with buildings reflect construction of new buildings since the 1983 listing. With comparison of original mapping, it was determined that 92 historic buildings and approximately 48 outbuildings had been demolished within the original boundary since the Hamburg Historic District was listed on the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP) in 1983. Concentrations of demolitions were readily identified along the southeast and northeast edges of the district, replaced by parking lots, a park, and two new buildings. Other demolitions proved to be more scattered among the blocks within the historic district and found in the southwest and northwest corners. The 1956 Sanborn fire insurance was utilized as a basis of evaluating the historic fabric of the Hamburg Historic District, dated from 30 years after the end of the period of significance (Figure 4). It was color coded to indicate buildings constructed by 1930 (pink; age dating this period, regardless of individual integrity/status), buildings constructed from 1930 to 1956 (blue), buildings constructed since 1956 (green), buildings demolished prior to 1983 (white), and buildings demolished since the 1983 listing (yellow). This mapping assisted in the evaluation of half-blocks per block integrity standards, as further outlined in the previous section.

County and State

With consideration of the historical and architectural significance of the historic district, the factors relating to the determination of the boundary originally, and the remaining integrity of the blocks or half-blocks within the historic district, the original boundary of the Hamburg Historic District was then re-evaluated. The resulting recommended boundary increase-decrease is outlined on Figure 2 on page 7. Overall, the boundary was drawn to follow lot lines of parcels considered to be contributing within the historic district. Parcels on the edges of the historic district not contributing to the historic district were eliminated, per typical current boundary standards for NRHP districts. Properties immediately adjacent to the current district boundary were also evaluated at a limited level, with one property further researched and noted to relate to the significance of the historic district. Thus, the boundary has been increased to include this adjacent property at the southeast corner. The boundary has also been decreased on the southeast corner, southwest corner, northwest corner, and northeast corner to eliminate half-blocks with a high number of demolitions, half-blocks with a low level of block integrity, and half-blocks overall disconnected from the historic district, physically and historically. On some blocks, boundaries were outlined at the parcel level to include contributing properties and exclude non-contributing or unrelated properties.

The overall result is a general tightening of the Hamburg Historic District boundaries and strengthening of the district included within the amended boundary. Despite the number of demolitions and alterations to properties since the Hamburg Historic District was listed in 1983, the re-evaluation determined that the majority of the blocks within the core of the historic district retained sufficient integrity to convey their historic physical appearance and significance. The edges of the historic district were closely examined, tested for historical/architectural significance related to the neighborhood, physical connection to the neighborhood, and overall block integrity. As noted, any historic district is defined as possessing “a significant concentration, linkage, or continuity of sites, buildings, structures, or objects united historically or aesthetically by plan or physical development.” The topography of the hill, historic development of the properties and blocks, and remaining integrity of blocks and individual properties were thus key factors in determining amended boundaries. Boundaries were determined to require revisions at the southeast, northeast, northwest, and southwest corners, as outlined on Figure 2. The resulting boundary justification and amended boundaries for the updated Hamburg Historic District are further discussed in Section 10 (page 132), with specific evaluation and revisions related to the boundaries as outlined below.

Southeast corner: The southeast corner of the Hamburg Historic District extended along the 400 and 500 blocks of W. 5th Street and north within the 600 and 700 blocks between Ripley and Harrison Street. The boundary at the southeast corner was drawn square, thus including a non-contributing commercial building and two sets of apartments. The boundary continued north along the edge of the hill/bluff in the middle of the block between Ripley and Harrison, which also separated the residential development to the east along Harrison from the residential development to the west along Ripley. The southern boundary extended west along 5th Street and the railroad tracks, noted as a dividing line between the residential area to the north and more industrial/commercial area to the south. Physically, the half blocks along 5th Street are found at an elevation similar to downtown, with the rise for the hill/bluff starting significantly at the mid-block alley.

A number of changes were noted in this corner since 1983. Demolitions throughout the north side of the 400 and 500 blocks of W. 5th Street, and the subsequent construction of two parking lots and one new building, have resulted in a complete loss of integrity for these half blocks. The boundary was thus redrawn generally along the mid-block alleys for these two blocks, with a single family residence on the side of the hill on Scott Street remaining within the boundary. The majority of these two half-blocks composed of parcels with demolished houses or new construction were thus eliminated from the historic district. The boundary at the southeast corner in the 500 block of Ripley and 300 block of W. 6th Street was further refined. The non-contributing commercial building was eliminated from the historic district, and the boundary was increased to include the Roosevelt Apartments at 301-307 W. 6th Street (Iowa Site #82-05688). These apartments relate to the development of the Louis P. Best Apartments at 705-711 Gaines in the core of the historic district and to the apartments around the corner at 509 Ripley and 515 Ripley. In both cases, these buildings mark the edge of the residential development of this corner and neighborhood, with commercial/industrial buildings then found on parcels and blocks to the north, east, and south. Thus, the boundary on this block was decreased on the south and increased on the east. The boundary along the east edge of the properties on the east side of Ripley Street to the north was also slightly refined to follow parcel lines of these properties, rather than a curved line along the hillside.

Middle-south: The middle of the southern boundary for Hamburg Historic District extended west in the 600 and 700 blocks of W. 5th Street along 5th Street and the railroad tracks, noted as a dividing line between the residential area to the north and more industrial/commercial area to the south.

While some demolitions were noted in these half blocks in the district along the north side of W. 5th Street, the overall physical appearance and integrity of the blocks is sufficient to convey their significance and the properties relate to the historic development of the neighborhood as it continues to the north. These blocks convey a strong sense of early two-story residences, with a number of brick examples. Thus, the boundary remains the same through these blocks, extending along the north side of 5th Street.

Southwest corner: The southwest corner of the district included the north side of the 800 and 900 blocks of W. 5th Street and the east side of the 500 and 600 blocks of Vine Street. It appears to have been drawn to create a simple square corner to include the properties to the east along 5th Street and the development of blocks to the north that extended west to Vine Street on the hill to the north.

A number of changes are noted throughout these blocks at the southwest corner, resulting in overall loss of block integrity and disconnect from the historic district. The topography is also flatter through these five half-blocks along the west end of W. 5th Street and W. 6th Street, with the hill that largely defines the historic district starting along the north side of the 800 block of W. 6th Street and the mid-block alley between W. 6th and W. 7th Street in the 900 block. Thus, topography does not strongly physically connect these half-blocks to the core of the Hamburg Historic District. A number of demolitions are noted on the south side of the 800 block of W. 6th Street, north side of the 900 block of W. 6th Street, and north side of the 900 block of W. 5th Street, resulting in half-block integrity of less than 50% for these three half-blocks and disconnect of the other two half-blocks from adjacent blocks within the neighborhood. A combination of demolitions and non-contributing buildings likewise results in half-block integrity of less than 50% for the north side of the 800 block of W. 5th Street. The south side of the 900 block of W. 6th Street retains more block integrity, though disconnected from the historic district by topography and block integrity issues to the east and north. Alterations of several buildings on this half-block bring individual building integrity into question and reduce the overall block integrity. This block is also noted for a different character of development, with a mix of duplexes and houses similar the block to the west rather than the single family residences on the blocks within the amended district to the east where duplexes are widely scattered. The intersection of W. 6th Street and Vine Street is bisected by Ash Street from the northwest, creating a five-point intersection and neighborhood node with commercial buildings on the northeast and southwest corners. As noted, the mix of duplexes and single-family houses on the 900 block of W. 6th Street is similar to the mix found in the 1000 block of W. 6th Street, and development in the 500 and 600 blocks of Vine Street form a north-south corridor at the foot of the hill/bluff that then defines the Hamburg neighborhood to the north and east. Historic research on these five half-blocks likewise revealed a mix of lower-middle class German and Irish residents, as well as the non-residential buildings on these blocks. The smaller house types and mix of residents found in the 800 and 900 blocks of W. 5th Street also continues more to the south and west, marking this shift from the upper-middle class neighborhood defined as the Hamburg Historic District to the additional German settlement in these adjacent areas.

Overall, through the evaluation and research, these blocks in the original southwest corner were noted as reflecting a different historical and architectural character than the remainder of the historic district, as well as suffering from overall block and individual integrity issues. The blocks were not noted as united aesthetically or historically by current integrity, property type, architectural character, historic development, or topography to the significance and core of the Hamburg Historic District. In fact, they were found to be more aesthetically and historically connected to the neighborhood defined as existing to the west and south of the Hamburg Historic District. Thus, the boundary has been significantly revised in this area to eliminate five half blocks, plus the north edge of the Vine Street corridor development on the east side in the 600 and 700 blocks. The amended boundary thus extends north from W. 5th Street to W. 6th Street, west along the foot of the hill to Warren Street, north for half a block to the alley, west along the alley at the foot of the hill between W. 6th and W. 7th Street, north along the edge of the hill and west parcel line of the property at 925 W. 7th Street, and further north along the edge of the hill and east edge of the property line of the new house (1957) at 711 Vine. It then returns to Vine Street at the point where the hill also extends to this limit along W. 8th Street and west historic development of Hamburg Historic District on this block. Thus, the amended boundary generally follows rectilinear property lines along the edge of the hill/bluff that defines the cohesive quality and historic development of the Hamburg Historic District.

Northeast corner: The east boundary for the historic district continued north from the bluffline on the east side of the properties on the east side of the 600 block of Ripley along the mid-block north-south alley parallel to Ripley north to 9th Street and then to the west along 9th Street. The edge of the hill crosses Ripley in the 700 block, with the properties on the west side distinctly on the hill while the properties on the east side are located in the lower levels that continue east to Harrison Street. The edge of the hill then crosses 9th Street to the north in the 400-500 block of W. 9th Street, including these properties on the north side of 9th Street on the hill and the sharply dropping off to the north in the 500-600 blocks of W. 9th Street. The boundary was drawn along W. 9th Street and then northwest along the edge of the hill and west along the north side of these properties on W. 9th Street.

This corner of the historic district has likewise witnessed several changes primarily due to demolitions since the listing in 1983. A fire struck the series of apartments in the flatter land on the east side of Ripley north of 703 Ripley, and six other houses have been demolished to the south and on the block to the north, creating a wide expanse of open land with a park and a new building to the east on W. 8th Street. Three buildings remain on the east side of Ripley Street to the north, somewhat modified due to alterations and more connected with the properties to the east. These two half-blocks have been eliminated due to loss of block integrity from the historic district, including a number of vacant lots, new park, new building, and three older houses. The revised boundary thus extends along the east and north property lines of 703 Ripley that roughly follow the bluff where it curves from the north to west-northwest, north along Ripley, and then west along W. 9th Street. The boundary has been refined to follow parcel lines in this area, extending then north along the east property line for 518 W. 9th Street, and then west along the north parcel lines for these properties and the edge of the hill. A number of demolitions were noted as impacting block integrity for this northeast corner remaining in the historic district; however, the strong topography of the hill/bluff through this area continues to visually unite the remaining properties to the historic district and somewhat obscures the missing elements.

Middle-north: The middle of the northern boundary for the Hamburg Historic District extended west along the hill on the north edge of the properties in the 600 and 700 blocks of W. 9th Street, with topography sharply dropping off to the north. The Gaines Street corridor development continued north for half of the 900 block of Gaines to the edge of this hill as well. Some infill of the valley to the north has resulted in flatter land and subsequent park development in this area.

Only a handful of demolitions or other building alterations were noted in these half blocks in the district along the north side of W. 9th Street and for the half block north on the Harrison Street corridor. The topography continues to play a defining role for the edge of the historic district, with the edge of the hill separating the residential development of the neighborhood to the south from the undeveloped lower valley and park area to the north. Thus, the boundary remains generally the same through these blocks, refined to follow the north edges of the property lines on the north side of the 600 block of W. 9th Street, north side of extant properties on the half 900 block on Harrison, and north side of the 700 block of W. 9th Street. The boundary then extends south along the west property line of 720 W. 9th Street to W. 9th Street and continuing west, refining this corner to include the contributing properties and exclude the park development connected to the parcels further to the north.

Northwest corner: The northwest corner of the district included properties on both sides of the 800 and 900 blocks of W. 9th Street and the east side of half of the 900 block of Vine Street. While the properties on the north side of these blocks appear more on the plateau that then continues to the north and the west, the boundary appears to have been drawn to again create a square corner, including the properties on the north side of W. 9th Street and part of Vine Street and then continuing south along Vine Street.

The boundary in this area has been revised to extend west along W. 9th Street from the property at 720 W. 9th Street west to Vine Street, then continuing south along Vine Street along the edge of the hill/bluff for the block and half to the south (which then cuts to the southeast, see above discussion on the southwest corner). The two half-blocks on the north side of the 800 to 900 blocks have thus been eliminated from the historic district. The north side of the 800 block has nearly completely lost all historic integrity, with only two historic houses remaining and a new duplex and garage built since 1983. Demolitions on the north side of the 900 block have likewise reduced block integrity to around 50%, with alterations to the remaining properties on W. 9th Street. The three Vine Street properties do not appear historically or aesthetically connected to the Hamburg Historic District, and they are part of the Vine Street corridor development that continues for the remainder of the 900 block to the north. A separate and distinct neighborhood was noted on this plateau area to the north and west of the northwest corner of the Hamburg Historic District, and these properties appear more connected to this neighborhood. The south side of the 900 block of W. 9th Street retains a high level of integrity, and these houses mark the northwest corner of development related to the Hamburg Historic District, including two large two-story homes built around 1880. While the blocks immediately to the east and south of this half-block have some integrity issues, they retain sufficient integrity to remain in the historic district and connect this related intact block on the northwest corner of the hill/bluff to the remainder of the historic district.

The demolitions and amended boundaries have thus impacted the total resource counts in the Hamburg Historic District. As noted, 394 parcels were identified within the original boundary of the Hamburg Historic District (Figure 3). These parcels included 270 with buildings (house or house and outbuilding), 34 that were lots when the district was listed in 1983 (historically vacant or previously demolished), and 90 that were now lots that had buildings in 1983 (including one lot vacated by a move of its house to new other vacated combined lots). Seven of the lots with buildings reflect construction of new buildings since the 1983 listing. Within the amended Hamburg Historic District, there are 293 parcels, including 226 with buildings and 67 that are currently vacant lots (17 vacant in 1983, one vacated due to moved house, and 49 lots with buildings demolished since 1983). Overall, these resources comprise 229 contributing buildings and 80 non-contributing buildings within the amended Hamburg Historic District. As a result of the boundary revisions, a total of 102 parcels have been eliminated from the historic district, including 45 with buildings and 57 that are currently lots. The buildings are comprised of approximately 23 that retain sufficient integrity to be contributing, 15 that have been significantly modified since 1983, four that were previously classified as non-contributing, and three that were built since 1983 and would be non-contributing. The remaining contributing buildings are located on blocks that do not retain sufficient block integrity to reflect their historic appearance and on blocks not strongly related to the significance and development of the Hamburg Historic District. Thus, the amended boundary reflects a general tightening of the Hamburg Historic District to better reflect the neighborhood and a strengthening of the historic district as redefined within the boundary.

Properties included and excluded from the amended Hamburg Historic District are included on the lists that span the next several pages. Additional information collected through the survey and research components of the amendment project are included on Table 1 following the lists of properties. This table includes new research on each property as well as updated survey data for each resource. Building status previously noted on the 1982 map and the current building status as contributing or non-contributing is also noted on this table.

Parcels not included within the amended Hamburg Historic District

As a result of the boundary revisions, a total of 102 parcels have been eliminated from the historic district, including 45 with buildings and 57 that are currently lots. Approximately half of the buildings would be classified as non-contributing due to construction or modifications after the period of significance. The remaining contributing buildings are located on blocks that do not retain sufficient block integrity to reflect their historic appearance and on blocks not strongly related to the significance and development of the Hamburg Historic District.

Table of buildings included within the amended Hamburg Historic District

The amended Hamburg Historic District is composed of 229 contributing, 80 non-contributing buildings, and three contributing structures (brick streets, brick alleys, retaining walls). No additional buildings, structures, sites, or objects warrant individual tabulation within the district. All buildings noted as contributing are significant historically (as noted with Criterion A) and/or architecturally (as noted with Criterion C) in relation to the district. A building with both historic (A) and architectural (C) significance is likely a key element in the historic district. These buildings generally have a high degree of integrity that reflects the historic nature of this district. They also reflect certain trends in the history of the district. Garages are also noted on the table, with garage built by 1926 and retaining sufficient integrity counted as contributing. Retaining walls associated with properties are likewise included on the table, with historic retaining walls (built by 1926) tabulated jointly as a contributing structure. Historic retaining walls that are the most prominent within the historic district are noted with an asterisk (*). The table below is organized by map number (block/address). Building history and field survey information was collected in 2014-16 during the survey update primarily by Rebecca Lawin McCarley (SPARK Consulting) and Ryan Rusnak (City of Davenport, staff to Davenport Historic Preservation Commission). Preliminary city directory and census research was completed by commission members and/or neighborhood residents John Dodd, John Frueh, Tami Lord, and Marion Meginnis, and some additional property owner research was completed by interns working for the City of Davenport.

8. Statement of Significance

Applicable National Register Criteria

(Mark "x" in one or more boxes for the criteria qualifying the property for National Register listing.)

- A Property is associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history.
- B Property is associated with the lives of persons significant in our past.
- C Property embodies the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction or represents the work of a master, or possesses high artistic values, or represents a significant and distinguishable entity whose components lack individual distinction.
- D Property has yielded, or is likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

Criteria Considerations

(Mark "x" in all the boxes that apply.)

Property is:

- A Owned by a religious institution or used for religious purposes.
- B removed from its original location.
- C a birthplace or grave.
- D a cemetery.
- E a reconstructed building, object, or structure.
- F a commemorative property.
- G less than 50 years old or achieving significance within the past 50 years.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Hamburg Historic District was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in May 1983 under Criterion A for social history and under Criterion C for architecture at a local level of significance. The historical and architectural significance of the district is tied directly to the residential development of Davenport and as a neighborhood of middle-upper class German immigrants located on the hill/bluff to the northwest of downtown Davenport. The period of significance was not specifically defined in the original nomination, and it has been better defined for this amended nomination. It spans from the construction of the earliest identified extant building around 1848 to the completion of the last residence representing the early 20th century development in 1926. The period of significance covers the early development of the neighborhood from the 1840s to the 1870s, when a mix of early Davenport residents and German immigrants chose this location immediately northwest of downtown to construct a residence. It continues through the key development of the neighborhood in the 1880s to early 1900s when large, prominent homes were constructed on the hill overlooking downtown Davenport and the Mississippi River by successful German immigrants and their children. The neighborhood was known in this period for its association with middle-upper class Germans, an association that continued into the first quarter of the 20th century. The development of the neighborhood began to taper off in the 1910s and 1920s, with the last residence reflecting this period of development completed in 1926. Thus, the period of significance spans from c.1848 to 1926.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

As originally written and listed on the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP) in 1983: "The Hamburg Historic District contains the largest concentration of historically significant houses in Davenport and displays some of the most outstanding examples of 19th century architectural styles in the city. In addition, the district represents the geographical location of the middle and upper income German settlement of the late 19th and early 20th century. The large German population had a dominating influence on 19th century Davenport, and Hamburg was the home of many prominent German business and political leaders."¹²

The amended nomination for the Hamburg Historic District continues to reflect this statement of significance as originally written and listed on the NRHP. The amended Hamburg Historic District is composed of the most architecturally significant residences and blocks with the highest concentration of historic buildings in this historically German neighborhood. The amended Hamburg Historic District continues to reflect the most significant collection of 19th century residential architecture in Davenport, as well as significant early 20th century examples, with 190 single-family residences built during the period of significance from circa 1848 to 1926 throughout the neighborhood. The large houses primarily reflect Italianate and Queen Anne styles, with other 19th century Victorian styles, 20th century revival styles, and Craftsman styles blended in. Smaller, earlier houses are mixed with larger later houses on some blocks, contributing to the significance related to the earlier development of the neighborhood and these blocks. Other historic property types (duplex, apartments, commercial, church) are scattered among the residences on these blocks and are concentrated along the Gaines Street corridor, and they contribute to the overall neighborhood fabric that gives continuity and integrity to the historic district. The amended Hamburg Historic District also continues to reflect strong ties to the German settlement of the late 19th and early 20th century, particularly the middle-upper class. Census data related to extant houses in the neighborhood by 1880 reveal 67 heads of households born in Germany, eight born in Ireland, five born in the United States, and one born in Austria. Similar data for the 173 households identified in the 1910 census associated with extant houses in the neighborhood indicates 74 heads of households born in Germany and 65 born in the United States with at least one parent born in Germany. These German residents included a number of men who were successful and prominent business, community, and political leaders, and women who likewise occupied positions as community and social leaders.

Developmental history/additional historic context information (if appropriate)

The following paragraphs are taken directly from the 1982 nomination for the Hamburg Historic District, listed in May 1983 as part of the "Historical and Architectural Resources of Davenport, Iowa" Multiple Resource Application, which contains additional contextual information on the residential development of Davenport and German settlement.¹³

As one of the early extensions to the original city plat, this northwest area of town contains excellent examples of the first permanent dwellings of the German immigrants: small vernacular one-story cottages, symmetrical Greek Revival houses and the popular two-story, three-bay front gable form. Throughout the district are outstanding Victorian dwellings styled in the Gothic, Second Empire, Italianate and Queen Anne, as well as examples of early 20th century Georgian Revival and Craftsman style houses. Supported by more common 19th and early 20th century house forms and by a handful of compatible modern dwellings, the district has maintained its architectural integrity throughout the 20th century. Architects designing in Hamburg included Frederick G. Clausen (412 W. 6th St, 624 W. 6th St, 817 W. 7th St), Gustav A. Hanssen (709 Brown), Benjamin F. Aufderhiede (703 Ripley, 525 W. 9th St), Deidrich J. Harfst (424 W. 7th St), and Thomas McClelland (630 W. 5th St, 530 Western).

Davenport Germans were a solid community geographically. Harrison Street formed the boundary between the Germans on the west and non-Germans on the east, while the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad tracks along 5th Street divided the middle and upper income Germans on the north from the lower income Germans in the "west end" south of the tracks. German immigration to Davenport began in 1848 and by 1858 nearly 3,000 Germans had settled in Davenport. This figure represented about 20% of the city's population. German immigration continued strong in Davenport through the 1880's and by the 1890's the city acquired a reputation as a German town — politically, socially and culturally. After World War I, however, in light of the xenophobic reaction of non-Germans, the German community as a single entity lost much of its dominating influence. In addition, Davenport's 2nd and 3rd generation descendants did not have the same language and cultural reinforcement of the immigrants and thus the homogeneity of "Hamburg" never returned.

Prominent German residents of the Hamburg Historic District include Henry Lischer (624 W. 6th St), owner-publisher of the German language newspaper, Per Demokrat; August E. Steffen, Sr. (420 W. 6th St), founder of the prominent Steffens Dry Goods Store and his son August Steffen, Jr. (412 W. 6th St), his successor; Henry Frahm (321 W. 6th St), owner of one of Davenport's most successful breweries; Hans Reimer Clausen (413 W. 6th St (an earlier structure at this address), a state senator in the 1870's and Davenport's most outspoken German-American leader; E.C. Mueller (413 W. 6th St, 429 W. 6th St) and Wm. L. Mueller (413 W. 6th St), owners of one of the major lumber milling companies; H. H. Andressen (726 W. 6th St), the founder of the German Savings Bank; Henry Koehler (817 W. 7th St), partner in the Koehler & Lange Arsenal Brewery; Carl Beiderbecke (532 W. 7th St), the city's most important wholesale grocery jobbers; F. Max D. Petersen (629 Brown), a partner in the major dry goods department store, J. H. C. Petersen & Sons; and William H. Weise (709 Brown), a prominent manufacturer and financier in Davenport at the turn of the century. These neighbors shared common roots from the German states of Schleswig and Holstein. In addition, they shared numerous family relationships through the intermarriage of sons and daughters of the first generation settlers.

The only institutional buildings in the Hamburg District with historical significance were the German Methodist Episcopal Church (c.1860) at 830 W. 6th Street, and the first Iowa College building (1848) at 517 W. 7th Street. The latter was modified in the late 19th century for residential use.

Together, the historical associations of these residential and institutional structures make the Hamburg district an unusually good collection of buildings significant in Davenport's 19th century German-American community.

Boundary Justification (Explain why the boundaries were selected.)

The boundary for the amended Hamburg Historic District has been drawn to include parcels that reflect the significant residential development and architecture of the district from 1848 to 1926 as defined through their association with this distinct neighborhood on the bluff/hill overlooking downtown Davenport and the Mississippi River that is historically connected with the German community in Davenport. Parcels that do not reflect these historic associations have been excluded from the district boundary and assist in defining the edge of the boundary. The boundary has been drawn as contiguous, so these parcels on the edge of the boundary not associated with the significance of the district are excluded from the district. Likewise, if these parcels are found between contributing resources, they have been included in the district as non-contributing resources. The boundary follows the current parcel lines associated with contributing properties.

The topography of this hill/bluff to the immediate northwest of downtown Davenport played a key role in attracting residential development to this neighborhood and continues to play a key role in definition of the neighborhood. The majority of the residences noted for their architectural significance in the Hamburg Historic District are found on prominent lots within the neighborhood, many with views of the Mississippi River. The edges of the hill also define shifts in types of development, including flatter sites associated with commercial development to the east and south and a shift to lower-middle mixed residential development to the west and south. Demolitions along the edges have also resulted in boundaries being tightened to eliminate blocks dominated by vacant lots and include blocks with a high concentration of historic resources.

The overall middle-upper class residential nature of the Hamburg Historic District distinguishes it from the surrounding area, and its historic nature and topography have guided the determination of the revised district boundary. The boundary at the southeast corner includes residential properties in the 500 block of Ripley and 300 block of W. 6th Street that mark the edge between the neighborhood and the commercial downtown. The revised boundary continues along the mid-block alley in the 400-500 blocks of W. 5th and 6th streets, including the residential properties on the side of the hill along W. 6th Street and excluding the parking lots on the sites of demolished houses along W. 5th Street. The boundary jogs south on Western Avenue to include the north sides of the 600 and 700 blocks of W. 5th Street, noted for their collection of primarily early two-story brick residences and separated from other commercial/industrial development to the south by the railroad tracks. The boundary continues north on Brown Street and west in the 800 block of W. 6th Street along the edge of the hill that defines the Hamburg neighborhood to the north. It jogs along the edge of this hill north slightly on Warren Street, west in the mid-block alley of the south side of the 900 block of W. 7th Street, and then further north, including large houses built on the hillside and excluding blocks and properties in valleys and on flatter land to the south and west with integrity issues and development not strongly associated with the significance or historic development of the core of the Hamburg Historic District. The boundary continues north on Vine Street in the 700-800 blocks and then west on W. 9th Street in the 800-900 blocks, encompassing the northwest corner of the hill and neighborhood development and excluding blocks with integrity issues and development more closely associated with the neighborhood to the north and northwest. The topography defines the north edge of the residential development in the 500, 600, and 700 blocks of W. 9th Street, and the boundary jogs north east of Brown Street to include these properties on the north side of W. 9th Street and Gaines Street along the north edge of the hill and neighborhood development. The boundary continues east on W. 9th Street in the 400 block to the east of these properties and then south along Ripley Street, again encompassing the edge of the hill to the southwest within the boundary and excluding blocks with integrity issues along the east side of Ripley. The edge of the hill then extends to the east side of the properties on the east side of the 600 block of Ripley, resulting in the historic development of these lots with prominent large residences. The boundary thus jogs to the east to include these properties and continues south in the mid-block on the east side of Ripley to W. 6th Street to encompass the hill and associated residences. The boundary then connects with the point of beginning with the residential properties in 300 block of W. 6th Street and 500 block of Ripley. Additional discussion on the boundary revisions and the resulting boundary for the amended Hamburg Historic District can be found in Section 7, pages 19-24.

Though historic archaeological sites have not been identified at this time, they could potentially contribute to the Hamburg Historic District. If necessary, the boundary could be adjusted to include these sites evaluated as significant. No current sites have been identified or evaluated for archeological potential or significance.

Photographs:

Submit clear and descriptive photographs. The size of each image must be 1600x1200 pixels (minimum), 3000x2000 preferred, at 300 ppi (pixels per inch) or larger. Key all photographs to the sketch map. Each photograph must be numbered and that number must correspond to the photograph number on the photo log. For simplicity, the name of the photographer, photo date, etc. may be listed once on the photograph log and doesn't need to be labeled on every photograph.
